Dear Sir/Madam,

It is time to apologize.

In the long ongoing discussion on the responsibility of science regarding crimes against humanity, one institution was omitted:
The Nobel Prize.

We, the signatories, call for remembrance of the immoral granting of the Nobel Prize for lobotomy to Antonio Egas Moniz in 1949. Lobotomy, especially being applied alongside force and violence in psychiatry, was an obvious crime against humanity. Having it rewarded with the Nobel Prize gave this cruelty the aura of good medical practice and promoted its use.

As the Nobel Prize cannot be recalled, we appeal to the Nobel Prize Committee and Assembly as well as to the universities which are entitled to create a nomination of the candidates for the Nobel Prize, to apologize for this by a deed of its own: namely by rewarding Gert Postel, a successful impostor of a senior doctor of psychiatry, with a Nobel Prize in Medicine. Since 1981 he has thrice proved the mere lie of any psychiatric knowledge and thus denounced it as an act against humanity. He proved with his existential experiment that within science there is a moral voice which is indeed necessary to limit the possibilities of science-based techniques and medical practice.

This aspect of Gert Postel's work has to be rewarded, despite all controversy as to whether or not he used criminal methods infalsifying a non-existant doctor's license in psychiatry and therefore diametrically opposing a principal dogma of the medical profession.

Gert Postel accomplished the famous David L. Rosenhan experiment and proved that it could be repeated at any time just as well on the doctors' side and therefore gives empirical evidence that there is no such thing as „mental illness“.

Your sincerely,
